

Gloria Borger

Exclusively Represented by the Washington Speakers Bureau

Gloria is the National Political Correspondent for CBS News; the political columnist for U.S. News and World Report, penning the biweekly “On Politics” column; and a regular panelist on PBS’ Washington Week. Before accepting the co-anchor job on CNBC’s Capital Report, with Alan Murray, former Washington bureau chief of the Wall Street Journal, Borger was a special correspondent with CBS News and appeared weekly as a panelist on CBS’s Face the Nation.

Gloria started her magazine career as a newsmagazine analyst at the Washington bureau of Newsweek, where she began as a general assignment reporter covering a variety of stories ranging from the Three-Mile Island nuclear accident to presidential campaigns. Politics soon became her beat, and she was named Newsweek’s chief congressional correspondent, the title she held before moving to U.S. News and World Report.

Borger first entered journalism as a reporter at the now-defunct Washington Star where she won a series of Front Page awards. While there, she also co-authored “Federal Triangle,” a spoof about political life in Washington.

Gloria is a 1974 graduate of Colgate University in Hamilton, New York, where she has served on the board of trustees. She was also the recipient of an IBM sponsored Watson Traveling Fellowship to study the British press. Borger lives in Washington, D.C. with her husband Lance Morgan, and their two sons.
